Normans Arrive in Ireland

Henry II lays claim to English overlordships of the Island. In 1166 Dermot MacMurrough, king of Leinster, was driven out of Ireland by the high king, RORY O'Connor. Dermot arrived in Bristol and appealed for help to Henry II, who licensed his subjects to go to Dermot's aid.

A number of Welsh magnates responded, including the earl of Pembroke, ("Strongbow"). They invaded Leinster in 1169/70 and captured Dublin. Stronger put himself in line for the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier by informing Deane's daughter, his wife Deane's death in 1171, King Henry allowed
